PALM BEACH GARDENS MEDICAL CENTER

Cetta Fasano

When Cetta Fasano and her husband planned a vacation to West Palm Beach from Turin, Italy, they never imaged that the trip would change their lives forever. During their vacation, her husband suffered a heart attack and was rushed to Palm Beach Gardens Medical Center, where his life was saved. That day, Fasano declared that she would volunteer at the hospital one day. She fulfilled this promise, and has been a volunteer in the Palm Beach Gardens Medical Center emergency department for three and a half years.

Fasano's kind spirit and personal experience with her husband's heart attack provide her with a unique sense of compassion and empathy toward both patients and hospital staff. She truly enjoys helping others, and is grateful to Palm Beach Gardens Medical Center for saving her husband's life. Fasano encourages other community members to volunteer for the hospital because, "It's a good thing!"
